STAFF ROLES:

The Captain
As the commander and ruler on board he is a highly educated man who has been a naval officer for many years. He is sympathetic to the crew; however, he runs a tight ship and is obeyed in everything.

The Cook
An old time sailor who is in charge of all the meals on board. His is an endless labor, as he must prepare separate meals for the Captain, officers, crew and passengers. He is a superstitious fellow full of sea lore and song.

The First Mate
The active lieutenant, second in command and sailing master. He is the chief disciplinarian and expects nothing less than perfection in the work of the crew. The Captain tells the First Mate what he wishes to have done and leaves the mate to fully carry out his orders.

The Second Mate
He is an experienced and able-bodied seaman. However, the Second Mate is not always the finest example of a sailor, as he is known to be a bit scurvy minded. The Second Mate likes to be the sailor’s friend and is always willing to help new crewmembers with their duties.
